SPEAKING OF TIPS—A tip is a piece of valuable information such as this, Haysard's Yellow Oil is a prompt and effectual cure for croup, colds hoarseness, sore throat, rheumatism, neuralgia, sprains and soreness of any kind. Known as reliable over 30 years.

Numbers of the women claim to have seen her in the old green dress floating over the well platform and going in and out of the wash house. They say that when she goes into the wash house she turns over tubs and keeps up a continual moaning as if she was in pain. She has even been seen in the day time, when it was dark and cloudy, wandering about the yard. One peculiarity is that when spoken to by any one but Sue Fletcher she disappears in an instant, then becomes visible in some other portion of the ward. Her favorite place is over the old well where she died. The spirit has been seen by the terror-stricken women to float over the spot for an hour at a time.

that is strange, something that is interesting ; and we consider that we are doing our readers a positive benefit if we are instrumental in placing such a publication within their reach. The special arrangement which we have made with the Cosmopolitan presents very unusual inducements. That magazine is already recognized as one of the most interesting publications of the day. It is seeking subscribers everywhere and obtaining them. The proprietors believe that the Cosmopolitan has only to be examined to secure a permanent subscriber. That is why we are enabled to make, if the offer is accepted before January next, such a very low rate, by which our readers can obtain the Cosmopolitan for little more than the cost of this journal alone. Just think of what the combination means ! You obtain your own home journal at about the regular price, and have thrown in a magazine which gives you, in a year, 1,536 pages of reading matter by the ablest writers of the world, including over 1,300 pages of illustrations that are unsurpassed in point

WE CLAIM THE EARTH--We claim the earth is round, and we know it's true. We also claim that Haggard's Yellow Oil cures sprains, bruises, burns, colds, croup, sore throat, rheumatism, neuralgia, and all painful or inflammatory diseases, and we know this is true. Yellow Oil is a true family remedy for lameness or soreness in man or beast.

An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. In no particular is this adage more applicable than to Gophers. One Gopher killed in April is worth a dozen in July. To avoid the danger always attending the dissolving of strychnine and the great waste of expensive drug, I have prepared a liquid strychnine of great strength and warranted not to precipitate. Farmers will find this much more economical than buying the crystals and dissolving it themselves. Put up only in 4 oz. bottles and warranted to be the best liquid strychnine ever put on the market.

The first annual ball given by the Moose Jaw Base Ball Club on Thursday evening last, in the C. P. R. Dining Hall was a grand affair. The hall was very appropriately decorated and under the magnificent light, which Mr. Smith has provided for the hall, the effect was decidedly pleasing. About 50 couples were present and enjoyed the dance until early the next morning. The music was furnished by a string band consisting of Prof. Black, Mr. Wm. Seal and Mr. Jas. McCauley, and were highly complimented by the dancers.

Archie Hood, son of Mr. James Hood, shoe maker, met with a rather severe accident on Saturday last while playing with some of the truck wheels in the C. P. R. yard. It appears he and a number of his play-mates were making fun for themselves by running the wheels up and down the track when Archie fell in front of the wheels one of which passed over his leg, making a nasty flesh wound. Fortunately the bone escaped injury. He is recovering fast. The C. P. R. yards are not intended for play grounds, and it would be just as well if the boys would find some other place for amusement.

One often sees on the streets of Athens a pleasant looking couple walking arm in arm. They are not past middle age, and have the air of people whose debts are paid, whose consciences are clear and whose digestions are always good. They are dressed in ordinary citizen's garb. Inside the collar of his coat is the trade mark of a famous London tailor, and the tail for her skirt has a stylish walking gown bears the imprint of a Paris dressmaker.

They always seem to be sightseeing, gazing into shop windows, looking into new buildings, observing the throngs of passers by, or, when all else fails, admiring the blue skies and bright sunshine of the City of the Violet Crown. No regal glitters on their bosoms, no liveried guard attend them. They make their way through the crowd, jostling and being jostled with unfailing good humor. Sometimes they may be seen standing on the curb on some house step, waiting to see a procession pass by or watching an illumination or other public pageant.

Again, the gentleman may be seen riding on horseback alone or attended by a comrade, but in civilian dress; or the lady may be seen on the promenade, escorted or being escorted by a huge Danish dog. But one notices that a great many people and all the officers and soldiers salute them with precise courtesy, and from this circumstance the conclusion is at last reached that they must be people of considerable importance. They are, in fact, the king and queen of Greece.—Chicago Herald.

Wood and Wren.

The Dundas Banner tells a romantic tale of how W. L. Bruce, a young Montrealer, fell in love with, won, and married Irene, the black-eyed daughter of Neokaleto, the well known Indian songstress. It appears they first met at Montreal, when Neokaleto and her daughter were guests at the house of Bruce's mother. A mutual attachment sprang up between the young people, and when Irene returned to her home on the Six Nations reservation, where she resided with her aunt, a Mrs. Powless, it was with a mutual understanding that as soon as possible they were to be married. By the aid of a bright young Indian friend Irene managed to pass between the two, and on Sunday week it was arranged that young Bruce should drive over from Brantford to a trysting place, and from there the two should drive to a minister's house and be made one.

But the proverb as to the course of true love was once again exemplified. The old aunt "smelled a rat" and set a watch, with the result that just as the lovers met they were intruded upon by some Indians who had followed Irene, and she was carried back to the reservation. But love overcomes all obstacles, and on Monday they met again, and this time succeeded in tying the marital knot, when the bride was once again seized and taken back. On Monday night, however, her friends seized her, brought her to Brantford, and delivered her to her husband, and on Tuesday they left for Montreal as happy as two young turkeys do.

Ill-fated Gentlemen.

A middle-aged man walked down the street. He took off his hat repeatedly as the passers-by recognized him and saluted him. Several of the enthusiastic residents of St. Paul took off their hats and waved them as he passed. Others cheered him. He smiled, raised his own hat in recognition of the compliment and passed on, only to receive similar ovations.

"Is President Cleveland in town?" asked a tourist, who witnessed the enthusiastic reception accorded the pedestrian.

"Not that I know of," replied a resident of St. Paul. "Why do you ask such a question?"

"Because," remarked the tourist, "I noticed some men passing along the street just now and everybody was cheering him. Who is the popular individual?"

"Oh! that was the directory man."

"What has he done?"

"What has he done? You haven't been here long, have you? Why, then, his directory contains more names than the Minneapolis directory."—St. Paul Globe.

Eugene Field's Watches.

I went fishing in Wisconsin last August, and fearful that harm might befall my gold watch if I took it with me, I bought a Waterbury watch for $2.50 and wore it. One day I dropped it in the bottom of the boat and it came all apart, with a succession of terrifying reports. I never before saw so symmetrical a case of instantaneous and complete dissolution. The larger intestine spread all over the bottom of the boat and curled up over the starboard side. As it lay quivering and growling there, I fancied for a moment that I had shipped a monster eel or some other kind of marine reptile. I towed the debris ashore and showed it to a doctor from Racine (Dr. Davis, a scientific man of profound research), and he has assured me, after critical examination and analysis, that the intestine of the Waterbury watch closely resembled the human bowels, being provided with a sacrum, a colon, a sigmoid flexure and all that sort of thing.

Some years ago I had a great deal of quiet fun with a watch of my own devising. I had little brass, of this city, put a stiff spring into a large hollow silver watch case. Whenever I turned the stem the spring would make a noise loud enough to be heard thirty feet away. I used to wind up this artificial thing between acts at the theatre, and people would wonder what kind of a watch it was. Occasionally I would let the watch drop on the floor; then I would pick it up unobtrusively and resume winding it. Eventually I gave the device to Henry P. Dixey, the actor.

Just before going to bed at night is the time I wind my watch, and it is a duty I never forget or neglect. My watch gains five minutes every two days, or upon every second day I set it back five minutes, thereby obliging the jeweler, insuring care, preserving my watch from a 10-year-old box which he wears.

Locusts have been seen from the remotest antiquity, and some Biblical tribes, from the circumstances, received the name of Amorophagi, or locust eaters.

Snails have been used as food from very ancient times. Pliny states that they were much appreciated in Rome, and were fattened on mud until they attained great size and excellent flavor.

Pliny says that the famous coast were held in high esteem among the Roman Patricians, and were fattened upon flour and wine. These insects are supposed to be grubs of a large Longhorn beetle.

Perhaps the most disgusting instance of reptile eating is that recorded by Humboldt (Personal Travels, II, 255), who asserts that he saw Indian children drag out of the earth centipedes eighteen inches in length, and eat them.

The nations of the Lake region of Central America, of which, doubtless, they gather on the shores of the lakes; and in Central America the natives make bread of the eggs of a large moth.

The Chinese, who are noted for their economy, eat the dry shells of the silkworm, after they have extracted their silk from the cocoons. They fry them in butter or lard, and add the shells of eggs, and season with pepper, salt and vinegar.

The palmed several gall flies (caterpillars), which are juicy, like apples, and crowned with red heads of heavy, resembling the colors of that fruit, are obtained in the Levant for their aromatic flavor, and are sold in the markets of Constantinople.

Ellen speaks of an Indian king who not before his guests a quantity of roasted worms, of which he said Indians were very fond, for dessert. Some Greeks who had been sent to have pronounced their flavor most delicious. Humboldt mentions that the Arabs of Yemen ate some kinds of worms.

Jackman, a traveler of the last century, says that, in 1738, locusts were generally served up in Barbary with other dishes, and were considered a great delicacy. They were prepared by the Moors to pigeon; and it was said that a person might eat a plate of about 200 or 300 without feeling any ill effect.

The locusts are said to rejoice at the appearance of a swarm of locusts, although the destructive insects devour all the verdure in the district. The natives eat them in such quantities that they soon grow perceptibly fatter. They also gather the eggs, and make of them a kind of brown, or coffee colored soup.

The Arabs, when there is a famine, grind locusts in their hand mills, or pound them in mortars, and mix with flour and water into a dough, which they bake as ordinary bread. But they not only employ locusts during a scarcity of corn, but, at other times, eat them as a delicacy. They boil them for a good while in water, and afterward soak them with butter into a kind of fricassee of good flavor.—The Old Gourmand.

A Great Event

In our life is the discovery of a remedy for some long-standing malady. The poison of Scrophulous in your blood. You noticed it from your misdeeds. Will you consent it to your offspring? In the great majority of cases, both Consumption and Cancer originate in Scrophulous. It is supposed to be the primary source of many other derangements of the body. Begin at once to cleanse your blood with the standard alternative,

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

For several months I was troubled with scrophulous eruptions over the whole body. My appetite failed, and I was unable to work. After trying several remedies in vain, I resolved to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and did so with such good effect that less than one bottle restored my health and strength. The rapidity of the cure astonished me, as I expected the process to be long and tedious.—Frederick Martin Fernham, Villa Nova de Gaia, Portugal.

For many years I was a sufferer from scrophulous, until about three years ago, when I began the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, since which the disease has entirely disappeared. A little child of mine, who was troubled with the same complaint, has also been cured by this medicine.—H. Brandt, Ayer, Neb.
